

Background

Richard Sheehan

During the last 30 years of his career as an insurance broker Richard Sheehan has arranged insurance cover and acted as a consultant to many different financial institutions.

His expertise in the analysis of crime and liability claims and knowledge of the risk exposures facing financial institutions, including awareness of their attractiveness as a target for the criminal and increased liability and accountability in these days of 'compensation culture' have given him a wide experience and knowledge in his field.

Marie-Louise Rossi

Over her 25 year career in the insurance industry Marie-Louise Rossi has specialised in risk management, financial service regulation and export credits & political risks.

She was Chief Executive of the International Underwriting Association [IUA] (and its predecessor, the London International Insurance & Reinsurance Market Association [LIRMA]) for over eleven years, until 2005, and her work in that time included overseeing the merger of LIRMA with the Institute of London Underwriters and involved representing this £11bn plus pa premium income international insurance and reinsurance market to governments/regulators (principally EU and US) and international institutions worldwide.

On account of her earlier career specialisation in political risks and her role at the IUA, since 9/11 she has been extensively engaged in discussions with governments on terrorism risks.
